Thanks Steve,

That was it alright. In fact there were several items that were unchecked that I set. Works now. BTW I was talking about going back top an earlier version of office, Offioce XP not Win XP. I'm not that crazy.

Thanks again, Roger

Thanks John, I appreciate the suggestions, but none of the above have helped. What if I go back and reinstall my XP version? Does it have package for CD or Pack and Go. Heck I remember as farback as win 98 having Pack and Go option. Maybe even in Win 95.

You're getting the Windows versions and PPT versions mixed up, I think.

Pack & Go and Package for CD are both PowerPoint features, totally independent of your Windows version.

Reinstalling Windows will have no effect at all, other than possibly breaking other things, wasting your time and making you grumpy. ;-)

Reinstalling Office may help, though. Try this:

Put in the Office 2003 CD, let the installer start.
It'll come up in Maintenance Mode.
Choose the top option, "Add or remove features ..."
Click Next

On the next screen make sure there's a check next to "Choose advanced customization of applications" (sounds scary; in plain English it just means "Let ME choose what I want to install"). Don't change anything else.

Re: package for CD does not show up in my ppt 2003

Click Next

In the next screen, click the + next to Microsoft Office PowerPoint and make sure that Package For CD is set to "Run from my computer".

If it's already set that way, cancel out of the installer.
If not, set it so and click UPDATE and let the install complete.

Re: package for CD does not show up in my ppt 2003

Thanks for your replay.

I did it (I believe correctly) right clicked and clicked customize. The two column subwindow opened and there was a list of menus on the left with a list of commands on the right. File was highlighted. Package for CD was not in the commands list. Just save as Web Page or Publish as Web Page.

I definitely have PPT2003 and it has SP2. It has plugins for Camtasia (movie and Flash files) and Adobe PDF

Hope we can solve this. Do appreciate your help.

Roger
