I am incredibly frustrated with a fault that has developed in Calendar in Outlook 2003. There has always been a fault in previous versions of Calendar and including 2003, that when you clicked on "find", gave it some search parameters, the results would be displayed in a list form, similar to email. The fault was, it would then accept this as the default view for the calendar.

You would need to click View then choose 1, 5 7, what-ever to get your view back. But now my calendar refuses to give me these options. It will only display in list view which is completely useless. YES I have removed all filters.

I have had to create another calendar called test- then change to that calendar which displays correctly and also shows in the "My Calendars" box both of the calendars, put a tick in the real Calendar as well as test- which shows both calendars in day view - then untick Test to view the real calendar correctly.

I can't tell you how frustrating this is. With the test calendar selected - 1 day, 5 day etc views are selectable. With the real Calendar selected they are not. I NEVER want to see my calendar in a list view -

When is the first servicepack coming out for office 2k3??? I can't wait!
