

Re: Outlook and SP3

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Outlook/microsoft.public.outlook.general/2004-03/2916.html>

From: Sue Mosher [MVP-Outlook] (suemvp_at_outlookcode.com)

Date: 03/12/04

Date: Fri, 12 Mar 2004 17:34:59 -0500

Right now, the best thing to do is not to install the patch. For people who have already installed it and are experiencing unexpected security prompts, turning off WordMail as the editor and disabling the applications that are triggering the prompts are appropriate workarounds to get through the weekend. Microsoft is well aware of the issues. Stay tuned.

--

Sue Mosher, Outlook MVP
Author of

Microsoft Outlook Programming - Jumpstart for Administrators, Power Users, and Developers <http://www.outlookcode.com/jumpstart.aspx>

"Deb" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:92c101c4087b$ce4f9c60$a601280a@phx.gbl...

> It seems to me, as the day has progressed and I read more > and more problems about this on here, that it might be > better for MS to patch their SP3 patch instead of > expecting everyone else to put out an update to work > with this poor excuse for an update. People have been > advised to "re-code" Outlook to get around the access > problems that are now cropping up due to this "patch", > turn off Word as their e-mail editor, notify other > companies to do fixes to fix this mess and things that > the general user shouldn't have to do. Things were > working fine until Bill decided it was up to him to > protect America. Security is great, don't get me wrong, > I employ as many security features as possible but I also > know that I had a system that was working fine until I > installed this Service Pack. Now all I have is Outlook > that locks up all the time because of using Norton > Internet Security and a PalmPilot that won't sync because > the powers that be have decided that they need to protect > me from my own equipment. As I've said earlier, I've > used Microsoft products for over 23 years, upgraded, > patched, applied fixes, service packs, you name it, and > I've never had one that messed with my system like this.
> Shame on Microsoft.