

Re: How do I change the default mail delivery location in Outlook?

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Outlook/microsoft.public.outlook.general/2004-10/3916.html>

---

From: Brian Tillman (tillman1952_at_yahoo.com)

Date: 10/14/04

Date: Thu, 14 Oct 2004 16:20:17 -0400

Kurt D. Wesolek <Kurt D. Wesolek@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote:

> Brian -- looking for help on a related question and saw your > response. Can I set each of my email accounts for deliver to > separate destination folders? Everytime I try to do this is changes > the destination for all of my email accounts not just the one > selected. Is there a fix for this?

Some accounts, like IMAP and HTTP, will each have their own message store that will be distinct from your default delivery location. However, all Exchange and POP accounts in a single mail profile will all share the default delivery location. You'll need to either use rules to move messages received through a particular account to distinct folders or you will need to use multiple mail profiles, with each profile containing a single account. In the latter case, each profile will have a distinct delivery location but you'll need to stop and restart Outlook to switch between profiles.

--
Brian Tillman