

Re: Outlook 2003 Gripes

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Outlook/microsoft.public.outlook.general/2004-10/5145.html>

From: Buford T. Justice (???_at_msn.com)

Date: 10/19/04

Date: Tue, 19 Oct 2004 12:19:30 -0500

- 1) I disagree. I think a lot of people like to view headers. I certainly do.
- 2) I was talking about BCC: in the preview pane. Even if I double-click on a message I sent using BCC:, I can't view BCC:.
- 3) If the news reader was identical to the one in OE 6, it would be a good one. Granted it should only be available if the user has added a newsgroup account.

BTJustice

--

"Diane Poremsky [MVP]" <dianenws@poremsky.com> wrote in message news:%238FUv6ftEHA.2800@tk2msftngp13.phx.gbl...

1) Outlook was used in a corporate environment where most users don't need to see the internet header. In fact, when receive mail from other users on your exchange server, there is no header to view. Even with some 50% of users using internet accounts, few need to see the header. You can use VBA to copy the header without opening the options dialog or get a program like pocketknife peek (freeware) to view headers easier.
http://www.outlook-tips.net/howto/viewing_headers.htm
<http://www.outlook-tips.net/getheaders.htm>
<http://www.xintercept.com/pkpeek.htm>

2) you can add the BCC field to the view - it needs to be visible in the message before sending (at least with word as editor) - then open the message to see it. You can also add the BCC field to the view. This works best when the preview pane is turned off on the sent items folder.

3) It'll never happen. Outlook is a poor substitute for a real newsreader, but if you really want to try, there are several addins you can use.
<http://www.outlook-tips.net/howto/news.htm>

--

Diane Poremsky [MVP - Outlook]

Author, Teach Yourself Outlook 2003 in 24 Hours

Coauthor, OneNote 2003 for Windows (Visual QuickStart Guide)

Author, Google and Other Search Engines (Visual QuickStart Guide)

Outlook Tips: <http://www.outlook-tips.net/>

Outlook & Exchange Solutions Center: <http://www.slipstick.com>

Join OneNote Tips mailing list: <http://www.onenote-tips.net/>

"Buford T. Justice" <???@msn.com> wrote in message news:2tkucjF1t72m2U1@uni-berlin.de...

>I doubt anyone working on future versions of Microsoft Outlook will see or > read this, but, if they do, then...

>

microsoft.public.outlook.general: Re: Outlook 2003 Gripes

> 1) Please use the same option that Outlook Express 6 uses to go to Sent > Items, right-click on messages, and view "Internet Headers". I know > 'technically' there shouldn't any, but Outlook Express displays them as > "Details". In fact, in Outlook 2003, the "Internet Headers" window could > be > taller or even be on its own tab for all messages.
>
> 2) Allow BCC: field to be viewed in Sent Items since I sent the message > that > way. I like to send BCC: to my customers so hopefully none get SPAM, but > I > like to know which customers received which e-mails. An example of what I > am talking about...
>
> DSL Modem Tips
> Me [me@me.com]
> TO: Joe Blow, John Blow
> CC: Jane Blow
> BCC: Spam Blow, Ham Blow, Jerry Blow
>
> 3) Let Outlook do newsgroups with all the same functions Outlook Express > uses. I am tired of using 2 separate programs.
>
> Thanks,
> BTJustice
>
>