Get an IMAP e-mail account which is designed to provide multiple user access (like you from home and you while travelling and your spouse from her job and ...). POP3 is not designed for multiple access. You can configure your e-mail to leave messages on the POP3 server but then you're stuck having to manage them and hopefully not deleting them before whoever is sharing that mailbox gets to read them.

See the IMAP section at <http://computer.howstuffworks.com/email.htm>.
