

Re: Automatically creating a rule in users Outlook 2003

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Outlook/microsoft.public.outlook.installation/2004-03/0027.html>

From: Diane Poremsky [MVP] (monkey_at_slipstick.com.invalid)

Date: 03/01/04

Date: Mon, 1 Mar 2004 12:16:54 -0500

Have you tested outlook's junk filter without using rules? My experience with GFI Mail Essentials (using the default filters) is that all mail marked as spam by GFI that really is spam is moved to junk mail folder when using the High setting. Outlook is doing a very good job – its catching a lot of spam that gets past spamassassian rules too.

--

Diane Poremsky [MVP - Outlook]
Author, Teach Yourself Outlook 2003 in 24 Hours
Coauthor, OneNote 2003 for Windows (Visual QuickStart Guide)
Outlook Tips: <http://www.outlook-tips.net/>
Outlook & Exchange Solutions Center: <http://www.slipstick.com>
"Chad Austin" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:0A9CC98B-A1C1-49D3-B3B9-A4B0170591A2@microsoft.com...
> During our custom roll out of outlook 2003 I have been asked to generate a > rule in everyones outlook to automatically route messages with specific > words in their headers to the JUNK E-Mail folder.
>
> The header is going to be modified by our SPAM filter and a keyword added.
> This will be the keyword used in the role to move E-Mail to the JUNK > folder.
>
> Again any help is greatly appreciated.
>
> Chad Austin