Neil,

If you have a POP3 acct, it will only download the messages that are in the Inbox from the web mail interface. I do not believe Yahoo offers IMAP service for their email accts. If you want the messages that Yahoo automatically places in its Bulk folder.

You have two choices:

1. Turn off Spam/Bulk Mail filtering on the webmail interface. So that all your email messages go into the Inbox, where Outlook will retrieve them.
2. With Outlook closed, go to Yahoo Mail interface. Select the messages from the Bulk Mail folder and Copy/Move to Yahoo Inbox. Then open Outlook and download the messages into Outlook's Inbox. If you want to leave the messages on Yahoo, you need to make sure that you set the Yahoo acct in Outlook, to leave messages on the server.

Thanks,

But I think I have a pop3 access. It is a Sbcglobal account. When I posted this message, Microsoft emailed " This is an e-mail message sent automatically by Microsoft Office Outlook's Account Manager while testing the settings for your POP3 account."

Do I still need a premium account?

How do I tell If I have pop3 Access?

Thank for your help.

you need pop3 access – which means you need to pay for a premium account if it's a yahoo.com address or use a 3rd party tool to bring the mail down. See <http://www.slipstick.com/addins/services/online.asp> for tools.
