Why aren't the first three lines in the Preview Pane in the Outlook Inbox window always the same as that in the autopreview of the Outlook Advanced Find window?

For example, if I search for a word using Outlook's Advanced Find, there are times that the found word is not there when I look at this message in the Outlook Inbox Preview Pane.

Because my employer automatically replies to requests for read receipts (I can not turn this option off), I try to use autopreview to set up rules to delete spam and junk mail prior to opening. I try to use the Outlook Advanced Find by searching for the title of the message, and looking at content to create a new rule. When three lines is insufficient, I use the Preview Pane in the Outlook Inbox window.

I suspect that there is some setting spammers are using to update the content of their messages as soon as they are opened. If I could discover their secret, then I could effectively delete prior to opening.

Thanks,

Sheldon
