Can someone please assist: I like to see the sender of a piece of email, then the subject matter or visa versa, then the date then the size. All this not necessarily with a preview

This is how my out look email has been set up for a decade or so by default. It has been the same with Outlook 2002 for a year or longer.

Suddenly the view has defaulted to a completely useless view of the fact that an item has been RECEIVED (which is kinda obvious as this is, for example, my inbox), next the time a message came in with the date. There is a PLUS on the very left which you have to click on to get the sender which you have to click on again to get the subject matter.(and I cant sort at all any more) As this is completely stupid, is this a problem for scanpst or detect and repair or is there some way of changing back to see the fields I want. The field chooser doesn't seem to do this.

There IS a subject column but it is empty, a date column but it is also empty and all the info is shifted towards the left of the panel.

Does anyone know what has happened and How do I get back please?
