Are you using IE 7? If you are using IE 7 it does not work, I tried it and an MVP asked me to install some patches to get that issue resolved, but I did not and just uninstalled it and it works fine with IE 6.0 browser.

Hope this helps !

Two days ago I began having problems with Outlook 2003 downloading/receiving/sending email to/from my Hotmail account. When Outlook attempts to download messages, a window pops up that says,

"Please enter your username and password to access the server:

Server: <http://services.msn.com/svcs/hotmail/httpmail.asp>
Username: xxxxxxxx
Password: xxxxxxxx"

After I enter my username and password and select, "Remember Password" and click "OK" the window disappears for about 2 seconds and then pops back up. I then click "OK" and then the process happens again. The window will NOT stop popping up requesting username and password and will NOT allow me to send/receive my Hotmail email.

I have removed the hotmail account and set it up again according to the directions outlined on Microsoft's webpage but the issue continues.

What is going on? Any suggestions? Any ideas?
