

Re: CInternetSession problem

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/PocketPC/microsoft.public.pocketpc.phone_edition/2004-05/0003.html

From: Vishal Kudchadkar (vishalkudchadkar_at_idelji.com)

Date: 04/30/04

Date: Fri, 30 Apr 2004 12:57:51 -0700

Vishal Radhakrishnan [MSFT] wrote:

- > I think what you are seeing here is just the workings of TCP. The CHttp
- > object uses TCP to transmit and there is a mandatory exponential timeout in
- > TCP before it gives up – so if you pull the plug, it will take your
- > application a while before TCP quits out.
- > This is just how TCP is implemented..
- > so what most applications do is to have its own timeouts and quit out of the
- > call if its taking too much time. When doing that you need to be careful to
- > not destroy the CHttp object before it returns out as otherwise you might
- > have memory corruption.

Hi,

Could you point me to examples/sample code to understand how implement applications can have user defined timeouts?

Thanks
Vishal