

Re: where are you microsoft? why still no wifi activesync 4??

Re: where are you microsoft? why still no wifi activesync 4??

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/PocketPC/microsoft.public.pocketpc/2006-08/msg00740.html>

- From: Arvychile <ruben.valenzuela@xxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 03 Aug 2006 11:35:01 -0400
-

xTenn escribió:

"dennispg" <dennispg@xxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:1154607733.010596.136340@xx

SO WHAT THE HELL HAPPENED WITH THE ACTIVESYNC TEAM?!?

where are you??? all i can find for reason to disable network syncing over activesync to regular pcs (not exchange) is "security" reasons. somebody please tell me if im just all wrong on this and there is more of a security risk here than a bunch of open TCP ports... (never mind that server products also have the necessity to keep open ports like activesync would need this feature.)

if thats all it is, ok then fine.. its a security risk. SO LET ME DECIDE WHETHER I WANNA TAKE THAT RISK!! how many times have i seen dialog boxes along the lines of "Only proceed if you understand the risks involved."

Obviously you are not in the lowest common corporate denominator that Microsoft was attempting to placate in this rather pitiful decision to remove wireless sync from AS... :)

MS give us back the option to decide the way we want our applications to communicate.