

Re: Publisher newsletter PDF, etc

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Publisher/microsoft.public.publisher/2004-06/0474.html>

---

From: JL Paules (JL\_Amerson\_at\_hotmail.com)

Date: 06/11/04

Date: Fri, 11 Jun 2004 07:42:19 -0400

I don't blame you for not putting her business information on your personal web space. Even if you don't use it for yourself, it is YOUR space. Plus what happens if/when you no longer work for her?

What about getting some freebie space for her? There must still be some places that offer you a small amount of free web space. I haven't looked into it lately but maybe Geocities? Does she have a computer with Internet access? If so, she just may have some space available to use.

(BTW, I belong to the EGA and am quite familiar with Project Linus. Do you work for a quilt shop? Is your newsletters for the quilting guild? There is a Yahoo Group available for guild editors. You might find that also a helpful resource. Contact me out of the group for information.)

--

JoAnn Paules

MVP Microsoft [Publisher]

"Donna in Idaho (remove invalid)" <daawra3553@yahoo.com.invalid> wrote in message news:qMayc.2082$on3.839@news01.roc.ny...

> No, the store that I do the quarterly newsletter for doesn't have a website > yet (and who knows when it will). She is being dragged into the electronic > age kicking and screaming. It took me awhile to convince her that trying to > send the newsletter strictly as an e-mail was not the way to go. Then the > customers who received the e-mail started complaining because it didn't have > the monthly calendars for all the scheduled classes. That's when she > finally decided that we needed to go the pdf route.

>

> The problem is: I don't feel that I should be putting the newsletter for an > established business on my personal freebie website & since she won't spend > the money to have a website developed, we're going the e-mail route.

> --

> Donna in Idaho

> Project Linus Boise/SW Idaho Coordinator

> Website: <http://donnakwilts.tripod.com/>

>

> Remove "invalid" to reply

>

microsoft.public.publisher: Re: Publisher newsletter PDF, etc

>
> "Steve in NC" <dtp2webSPAM@netscape.net> wrote in message > news:xr9yc.1252$Wr.791@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net...
> > Sorry but I haven't been following this thread in depth...
> >
> > But do you have a web site for your company/group/association??
> >
> > If so, just make the newsletter available there for viewing or download > > and you don't have to fret about emailing something to people who might > > not want a large email download or worry if they have the program to > > read it or whatever. Just email them and say "It's online at http etc > > etc etc" ...
> >
> > If you don't have a website... someone in your org probably has the > > cyber space with their web host to put a simple page up to announce the > > availability of the newsletter for access ..... what's the problem???
> >
> > Why is this emailing of PubDocuments in PDF such a problem?! Just upload > > it and tell the members "HERE IT IS".
> >
> > i've been doing this for years..
> >
> > back lurking
> >
> > Steve in NC
> >
> > Donna in Idaho (remove invalid) wrote:
> > > I kinda wondered if everyone wouldn't have Acrobat already. But, after > some > > > of the experiences we're having with customer's e-mail addresses, I'm > not > > > too sure of anything. A couple ladies gave the store owner their e-mail > > > address & then told her they rarely, if ever, check their e-mail.
> Another > > > told her she has her e-mail address blocked so no one can get in!!
So,
> why
> > > did she give out that e-mail address?!!!!!!
> > >
> >
>
>
---

Outgoing mail is certified Virus Free.
Checked by AVG anti-virus system (<http://www.grisoft.com>).
Version: 6.0.701 / Virus Database: 458 - Release Date: 6/7/2004