

microsoft.public.sqlserver.programming: Re: SQLDMO user stop server, windows user can't

Re: SQLDMO user stop server, windows user can't

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/SQL-Server/microsoft.public.sqlserver.programming/2004-08/2221.html>

From: Steve (steve_at_somewhere.invalid.com)

Date: 08/11/04

Date: Wed, 11 Aug 2004 11:25:20 GMT

Peri wrote:

- > I have an application using SQLDMO and C#. The application
- > will always use windows authentication to sql servers. The
- > problems is why does an account which is connected through
- > sqldmo can stop/start/pause a server in which that account
- > has no privilege in stopping/starting....the server....
- > Can anybody tell me why does this happened?

Starting, stopping and pausing the server is a Windows function, not SQL server itself. Any user with administrator access to the box can start and stop Windows services, and that includes SQL server.

--

Steve Mayne