

Re: UDF and SQL2000 – Why doesn't this work?

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/SQL-Server/microsoft.public.sqlserver.programming/2004-08/3031.html>

From: Calvin X (freerobotno_spammingdrone_at_rotsnail.com)

Date: 08/13/04

Date: Fri, 13 Aug 2004 16:48:30 -0400

I left that in by accident...

"JDP@Work" <JPGMTNoSpam@sbcglobal.net> wrote in message news:OFcHrWXgEHA.3932@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl...

> ...not an answer, but do you init your total var inside your while?

>

> TIA

>

> JeffP....

>

> "Calvin X" <spam_freerobotno_spammingdrone@rotsnail.com> wrote in message > news:uVAcg0WgEHA.636@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...

> > Hi Everyone,

> > I am having some problems getting this user defined function to return data > > that I need. Basically This is what I want to do – I have created a query

> > that breaks down values for a period start and end into a daily value and I > > want to loop through these values and sum the total value based on the > > period that is passed to the function. The period that is passed is most > > ofter quite different than the period that is defined for the query values

> > that are being broken into daily values.

> >

> > The loop only seems to run through once and then it exits returning either

> > NULL or the correct value for one day. When it returns null I run the same > > query against the data source and it gives me the value I need.

> >

> > Ay help would be great thanks,

> >

> > Calvin X

> >

> > CREATE FUNCTION dbo.SumVarForPeriod (@Var nvarchar(50), @PeriodStart > > datetime, @PeriodEnd datetime)

