

Re: SQL Profiler producing phantom traffic

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/SQL-Server/microsoft.public.sqlserver.server/2004-09/0156.html>

From: Narayana Vyas Kondreddi (answer_me_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 08/31/04

Date: Tue, 31 Aug 2004 20:58:33 +0100

Can you show us what sort of traffic you are referring to?

Could it be that there was a server side trace running? You can verify this using `fn_trace_getinfo` function.

--

Vyas, MVP (SQL Server)

<http://vyaskn.tripod.com/>

"Wex" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:3a4d01c48f8d$25b38820$a601280a@phx.gbl...

> I have a user who is running SQL Profiler on their client > machine. During the development phase of this project they > used profiler to help with their coding. Now that we have > taken the project to staging and production they no longer > have the necessary rights to run profiler.

>

> Here is the problem: Our firewall is blocking traffic > between the users machine and the SQL server. Regardless > of which machine the user connects to with profiler (he is > using it for other projects), there is traffic that is > produced about every second as the SQL server tries to > respond to profiler. The user is NOT trying to run any > traces against the SQL Server. Even if he was, our > firewall blocks the traffic.

>

> Thanks

>

> Does any one have any ideas how to stop this unnecessary > traffic?