

Re: Changing Data Storage Location to Network Drive

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/SQL-Server/microsoft.public.sqlserver.setup/2007-11/msg00183.html>

- From: Ekrem Önsoy <ekrem@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 10:20:44 +0200
-

What do you really want to do? Keep a copy of your database files on a remote machine in your network?

Or keep the client tools on the current server and move your database engine and files to another server?

Or are you looking for a NAS \ SAN solution?

—
Ekrem Önsoy

"rmcompute" <rmcompute@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:383C35FA-97D4-41DF-98E2-E1C1A001901F@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

Not the answer I wanted to hear, but thanks for the information.

"Andrew J. Kelly" wrote:

SQL Server does not support databases hosted on a network drive.

—
Andrew J. Kelly SQL MVP
Solid Quality Mentors

"rmcompute" <rmcompute@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:0AEC1BEF-DAF7-4DCC-AAA1-8E253679A653@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
>I installed SQL Server on my PC and have created a few databases which >have > been saved there. I would like to leave SQL Server installed on my PC, > but > have all of the databases moved to the network drive. Where would I > make > this change and are there any precautions I need to take since the > database

Re: Changing Data Storage Location to Network Drive

- > is already created. Also, once I locate the file holding the data, > can
- > it
- > simply be copied to the network drive?