Hello All

A quick question. We are moving an Access database over to SQL Server 2005. No problems. The SQL Server database will be located on it's own server. To test the system, I installed SQL Server 2005 Express onto the server, got the database attached etc. No problems. I installed the same Express version onto a client computer so that the operator could use the database from his workstation, tried to attach the database, but the network drive was not listed in the file dropdown box..only the local C: and D: drives. My gut says that Express won't look at network drives, anyone care to comment?

Thank you

David.
