

Re: 8192 character limit in Query Analyser when returning data, how to save result without newline every 8192

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/SQL-Server/microsoft.public.sqlserver.xml/2004-04/0138.html>

From: Michael Rys [MSFT] (mrys_at_online.microsoft.com)

Date: 04/18/04

Date: Sun, 18 Apr 2004 00:07:42 -0700

You can write a small VB Script using ADO that will use the ADO result stream to write the FOR XML result directly to a file.

I think some code may be available at <http://www.sqlxml.org>.

The Query Analyzer used ODBC, that had no streaming result support (Workbench in Yukon will be better) and added the line-breaks about every 2033 characters.

HTH
Michael

"Niklas E" <raven_tln0sp4m@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:OD44$SFJEHA.2424@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...
> When I run a for xml query in query analyser, the result gets split up > with > line breaks if I save it to a file. How can I save the result without > these > line-breaks? I have 185000 line-breaks in my result and that is not easy > to > replace. Try to open a 785MB in a text-editor(=coffe-break). It is the > result of a SP. Is there some way to save it directly to file, e.g. exec
> SP_MyXMLData > C:\big.xml
>
> Best regards
> Niklas
>
>