

Re: Some sort of bug

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Scripting/microsoft.public.scripting.virus.discussion/2004-03/0169.html>

---

From: larrydalooza (larrydalooza_at_yahoo.com)

Date: 03/16/04

Date: 16 Mar 2004 11:59:48 -0800

"Bill Sanderson" <Bill_Sanderson@msn.com.plugh.org> wrote in message news:<uDgbdRiCEHA.688@tk2msftngp13.phx.gbl>...

> If you have antivirus, and are keeping it up to date, and found files in > quarantine, that's good--that's what it is supposed to do.
>

hello

> When you say "deleted a whole bunch of files" say more--deleting the files > in quarantine shouldn't be bad for the system, in general. Deleting files > randomly elsewhere can be bad indeed. jirlbeck@ftdi.com
>
> *Scandisk can have problems running to completion even on healthy systems.
> You might try starting in safe mode and running scandisk.*
>
> Before going to safe mode, update your antivirus definitions, then after the > scandisk, do a complete scan of all files with Norton while still in safe > mode.

>
>
>
>
> *"Ben D." <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message > news:BDCCB53C-0B16-457B-9A24-7CFD570D06AA@microsoft.com...
> >I have windows 98. My machine started running very slowly and we found > >quarantined files in Nort Anti. I deleted a whole bunch of files. Probably > >not the thing to do. I cannot even get scandisc to run all the way through.
> >There was a bunch of kindall.mm That I deleted as well. I've tried all of > >my little tricks and cannot get my processor out of granny.. Any ideas or > >advice regarding this? Thank you*