So forums will still run separately on apache web server with jive/java software, but be indexed for search within the company's sharepoint site.

In expert terminology, you need to find an existing Ifilter for the forum. This is a major undertaking, and your managers should be looking for a third-party developer with the capacity to build one.

It is beyond my capacity to do so, and from the questions you are asking, beyond yours, also. So, the sooner you tell your managers the situation, the sooner they can get off their butts and find the needed resources.
