My apologies if I've offended you,

No – I phrased my post poorly.

It's just that I /strongly/ recommend never making the same assumption MS
so often does – that "IE is everywhere" – because among smart people, it isn't so.

And the unstated assumptions are the worst.
There's no problem sharing something which only works with IE if (and only if) you say so in the first place. Some people (like me, usually) will just go without, while some will probably take the risks, and some will do as I only occasionally will, and fire up a sandboxed copy or utilize some other safe mechanism.

You really did play into their game, if only for a moment, and I wanted to make sure you became aware of it.

I agree that I did fall into the trap there briefly and not to belabor the point but it also works when pasted into ~Windows~ Explorer but that's beside the point. LOL

I'll watch my step from now on. <g>
