

Re: Socket SecurityDescriptor

Source: <http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/VC/microsoft.public.vc.language/2005-10/msg00368.html>

- From: "Arnaud Debaene" <adebaene@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 13 Oct 2005 19:53:27 +0200
-

Neelay wrote:

> Hi guys,
> Is there any way to associate a securitydescriptor with a socket?
Not that I am aware of.

> meaning when you create a new socket is there any way you can set the > access permissions on it like you can do for mutexes, events etc? Is > there no security descriptor on a socket by default meaning everybody > has "RW" access?

A socket is not shareable among processes, so there is really no point in protecting it... Against who would you protect your socket, except against yourself?

Arnaud
MVP – VC

-
- Prev by Date: Re: What happens after an int is returned by the main in a console app?
 - Next by Date: AfxMessageBox or DoModal uses 100% CPU?
 - Previous by thread: What happens after an int is returned by the main in a console app?
 - Next by thread: Re: Socket SecurityDescriptor
 - Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread