But I find the sample is not quite clear to understand since it mixed a couple of other concepts. Do you have recommendations for other samples which is more clear to understand access control for folder?

George, you need to do some of your own research first. A forum like this can only go so far towards helping you. Clearly you need to learn the basics of security before proceeding. It's a deep subject and you'll only find limited help here. My usual recommendation is to purchase "Programming Windows Security" by Keith Brown. It's well worth the $ but if you're on a tight budget (assuming this is coming out of your own pocket – if not then ask your employer), then start your search with terms like DACL (Discretionary Access Control List) and "security descriptor". You can start here:
