You Vista haters, what in earth do you do in

up with your crap!

Again that didn't happen with XP which mostly was hailed as a true
step forward. But wait... the biggest thing the fanboy crowd runs away from is 84% of business users currently running some version of Windows HAVE NOT upgraded to Vista and have no intention of doing so either.

Why would what businesses do in that respect reflect on Vista ?
You have no idea what they "intend" on doing.

Re: Vista is the BEST OS

Look at past history. A good number of business users upgraded to XP AFTER the first Service Pack came out. That isn't happening with Vista and Vista has been out over a year now.

Look at past history ?

Computers have a pretty short history.

Looking at one previous event would hardly establish an accurate correlation.

If you go to Indiana, and its raining...you conclude it rains every day in Indiana ?

Most businesses don't replace their equipment for the hell of it. A business with a fleet of 2006 Chevy Silverado's don't shit can them all and buy 2008 Silverado's just cause they came out. All your quote really says is that 84% of businesses are happy with their current computers/OS...or they are facing economic conditions that don't justify changing.

It seems the vast majority of business users aren't buying Microsoft's marketing hype. You fanboys always try to play it both ways. If Vista was the wonderful OS you claim, then everyone would be beating down the doors to install it to take advantage of all it's "new" features and improvements. Isn't happening. What is happening is many are demanding XP's availability be extended because they have read all the horror stores about Vista and don't want anything to do with it.

The majority of businesses are going thru economic uncertainty. That is the primary reason for staying put.

Fanboy ?

You seem to be a fanboy of ridiculous labels.

If you knew what you were talking about, you'd go by the nic Hobbes.
