The Ultimate update/install dumps out. It will not continue.
Thats the problem.
I would continue the update/install if I could.

It says it can not continue and begins the roll back.

Ignore the update advisor as it's old.

The upgrade should work fine if you just install it.

The upgrade will not complete its install. It quits and says it can not continue ...it gives me no choice. It also says run Upgrade advisor so I can find out where the conflict is and correct before the upgrade will work.

I have no idea what VHP or MBR is. Please dont assume we know these things.

Re: Ultimate will not install over my Home Premium correctly

understood. Make a full image backup (including the MBR)
of your VHP partition and run the upgrade anyway. Unless you are migrating from x86
VHP
to x64 VU, I don't see how the board can not be supported with the current nVidia driver. If you bought the card separately and the card is branded
by someone other than nVidia (like evga) and it is merely using the nVidia engine, then be sure the driver comes from the card mfg and not nVidia.
If
your computer came with VHP preinstalled, including the card, then get
the driver from the computer mfg.

I did uninstall Vista SP1 and and tried Ultimate again and it was then able to upgrade however I ran into another problem. It told me there was a device
problem and I ran Vista Update advisor and it told me Vista will not support my Nvidia GeForce 8800 GT. This is strange because my Vista
home
premium is running with and it works fine. I did go to the nvidia site
and downloaded the latest Vista drivers for the 8800 GT rebooted and again
Vista
update advisor told me Vista will not run with this video card.
So again I am unable to upgrade to Ultimate.
Any ideas on this problem>

I have a full version of Home
Premium
and have been running it
for a
year
or more.
I bought
Vista Ultimate
upgrade.
However
when I try
and install
and
upgrade
to Premium
I get a
message
saying...

You need a
newer
this software to upgrade.

I am
running
Vista SP1.
It offers to do a clean
install,
which I do
not want.

Re: Ultimate will not install over my Home Premium

What does
Ultimate
want?? It is so vague.

If it is an upgrade it
certainly
does not need a clean
install.

Any help on
this?

Jim

If you are running Vista SP1, and the version of Vista on the DVD is pre-SP1, it will not upgrade the system. If you have installed SP1 as an update to your system, you can uninstall it, run the upgrade and then
re-apply SP1..
