Hi Jason,

Currently are you able to create a new web application under your IIS site? If the application can run correctly, can we successfully manually attach the asp.net worker process (aspnet_wp.exe) to do the debugging?

Please double check your IIS's virtual dir to see whether it has used the integrated windows authentication.

BTW, is the error following the "Unable to run debugging...." still be the "Access Denied"? If so, we may still try something on the security. Have you tried uninstall and reinstall the asp.net on your server through the

aspnet_regiis -u aspnet_regiis -i

comands? You can run them first. And then, try deleting the user profile from this machine and then added the account back to the administrators group

- a. From the control panel, open the User Accounts icon
- b. Locate the user in the list and delete it
- c. Boot the client machine in safe mode and login as the local Administrator
- d. Rename the C:\Documents and Settings\username folder to C:\Documents and Settings\username
- e. Add the user back to the Administrators group
- f. Log in as that domain user(or if local account)

Also, you can try using some other powerful account to logon your box to see whether you can correctly debug asp.net apps.

Hope helps. Thanks,

Steven Cheng
