

Re: Share Folder Permission on xp in a 2003 domain

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/Win2000/microsoft.public.win2000.active_directory/2005-05/msg00296.html

- From: rodrigo.cobas@xxxxxxxxxx
 - Date: 9 May 2005 12:31:13 -0700
-

If you really really need your users to be power users I'd choose to use restricted groups to make Domain Users member of the local Power Users group on the workstations instead of granting them all those user rights that could pose a big security threat.

Josh Davis ha escrito:

- > Paul this can be delegated via group policy. I found a way.
- >
- > The main problem is that by default there is no power users group
- > on the DC side if this existed things would be easier right out of
- > the box to implement.
- >
- > GP setting to allow xp user to create shared folders.
- >
- > LOCAL POLICIES "User Rights Assignments" from new gpmmc snap in.
- > "Computer configuration"
- >
- > permissions needed
- >
- > Access the computer from the network
- > Act as part of the operating system
- > Add workstations to domain "Can be disabled later on "
- > Allow log on locally
- > Backup files and directories
- > change the system time
- > create a pagefile
- > create a token object
- > create global objects
- > create permanent shared objects
- > log on as a service
- > perform volume maintenance tasks
- > Manage auditing and security log
- > restore files and directories
- > shutdown the system
- > synch directory service data

Re: Share Folder Permission on xp in a 2003 domain

> take ownership of files and other objects.
>
> I created a new OU put the user in the ou, created a gp called power > users based on the above, ran gpupdate on dc and client. By default > all user accounts are a member of the domain users group.
>
> default domain policy at root of tree is as follows.
>
> LOCAL POLICIES "User Rights Assignments"
>
> Access the computer from the network
>
> Administrators/ Authenticated users /
> Domain Admins / Domain Users
>
> Act as part of the operating system
> "As above"
>
> Allow Log on locally
> "As above"
>
> Create permanent shared objects
> "As above"
>
> All others are default "Not Defined"
>
> I would be interested what you think on this
>
> Thanks Josh...
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> On Mon, 25 Apr 2005 08:17:58 +0100, "ptwilliams"
<ptw2001@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
> wrote:
>
>> A normal user cannot create a share. The minimum requirement for this is to >> be a member of the (local) power users group. This is one of the few >> things, I believe, that cannot be delegated.
>>
>> For information on adding users to the power users group of local PCs,
>> please refer to the following article:
>> -- <http://www.msresource.net/content/view/45/47/>

- Prev by Date: Re: WIn2003 Trust betwee domains, same forest is possible ?
- Next by Date: Re: Best process for seting up remote DC?
- Previous by thread: WIn2003 Trust betwee domains, same forest is possible ?
- Next by thread: Domain Local Groups not accesssible
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread