I've begun to have a weird problem that I'm hoping someone can shed some light on (Dell Latitude 860, SP4, W2K): when I click on, say, a film file in one of my folders, I get some sort of security script message ('file has changed, do you want to accept script?') and then the folder contents disappear and I get a little box with a little dot in the middle, barely decipherable, in the upper left corner. All folders revert to this and I have to reboot to get back the folder contents. A few desktop icons also move and the 'my documents' icon disappears completely (until rebooting).
