

Re: Internet connectivity over LAN problem >> clients should point at the LAN IP of your router (whatever one you use, >> and >> is connected to your DSL modem, configured for PPPoE, whatnot) as default >> gateway. You might also install DHCP on the server – generally better >> than >> letting your router do DHCP.

>>
>> I suggest you do some reading and play with spare hardware before >> deploying >> AD, if you don't have any experience with it or Windows domains in >> general.
>> Also sub to microsoft.public.windows.server.active_directory and lurk in >> there for a bit.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> > mill
>> >
>> >
>> > "Lanwench [MVP – Exchange]" wrote:
>> >
>> >>
>> >> "millin" <ssuj@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx(No Spam)> wrote in message
>> >> news:01B4C263-78C5-42F5-AF36-2D58F1A55F79@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
>> >> > So If I have a broadband router/firefall ,could you tell me how can >> >> > I >> >> > configure NAT on the Router.I am having a Cisco 2503 router.can i >> >> > configure
>> >> > NAT with that one.
>> >>
>> >> Yes. I don't know how, but it can do NAT.
>> >>
>> >> > I have got 5 pc's with windows XP pro running,and one pc with server >> >> > 2000
>> >> > .How can i configure the whole system for internet connectivity.
>> >> > I am using a Broadband connection (PPPoE).
>> >>
>> >> Don't know if your Cisco can handle PPPoE...if not, get another box to >> >> put >> >> between it and your LAN. They aren't expensive.
>> >> >
>> >> > "Lanwench [MVP – Exchange]" wrote:
>> >> >
>> >> >>
>> >> >> "millin" <ssuj@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx(No Spam)> wrote in message
>> >> >> news:934C99D9-A4FD-4F52-9223-7C4607D6C0E9@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx >> >> >> > Hi All,
>> >> >> >
>> >> >> > I am having problem with connecting to the internet.
>> >> >> > My ISP is connected to an XP pro PC and which is shared by ICS.

Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem

>>>>> Normally I am using ICS (XP Pro) for connecting to my home >>>>> network
>>>>> computers >>>>> to the internet.Recently I have added one more computer which is >>>>> running >>>>> windows SERVER 2000 to my home networking system.I have >>>>> downloaded >>>>> the >>>>> NIC
>>>>> driver from manufacturer web site and I do not thing any problem >>>>> with >>>>> my >>>>> NIC
>>>>> driver.Cause when I ran the ipconfig/all command i can see it is >>>>> getting >>>>> an >>>>> ip address in the range of 192.168.xxx.xxx.But I can't connect to >>>>> the >>>>> internet as well as i can't see my computer on the eorkgroup.
>>>>> can anybody give me some info/advice/help to solve this issue.
>>>>> Thanks in advance.
>>>>> mill
>>>>>
>>>>> My advice? Ditch ICS and get yourself a decent broadband >>>>> router/firewall >>>>> appliance (Netgear, Linksys, Dlink, etc). ICS stinks. Set up the >>>>> router >>>>> to >>>>> do NAT – and have DHCP run from the server or from the router.
>>>>> Since >>>>> you're >>>>> using a server, you probably want it to have a static IP itself.
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>
>>
>>

-
- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
 - ◇ From: millin

Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem

• References:

- ◆ Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
◇ From: Lanwench [MVP – Exchange]
- ◆ Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
◇ From: Lanwench [MVP – Exchange]
- ◆ Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
◇ From: millin
- ◆ Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
◇ From: Lanwench [MVP – Exchange]
- ◆ Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
◇ From: millin

- Prev by Date: Services.exe hogs 99% of CPU time
- Next by Date: Re: Services.exe hogs 99% of CPU time
- Previous by thread: Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
- Next by thread: Re: Internet connetivity over LAN problem
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread