I have my default domain policy set to make the security log file size 4096k and the retention method set to "As Needed".

If I log onto almost any of my servers, I can use gresult.exe to see that the policies have been applied, but when I go to the event viewer and look at the properties for the security log, they have not been applied.

It appears as if there is another policy overriding it, because I can change the settings manually, but later they revert back. I don't have any other domain GPO's with any security settings, and I don't see any local security settings related to the log files.

What am I missing here?

Thanks
