No idea what they are without the names. Sorry.

The column is resizable. Use the mouse to "grab" the edge that meets up with the page body and move it to the left.

Depends on what the services are and why they were disabled. Personally, I never use this area to enable/disable services. Instead I use the console for Services found in Administrative Tools. However, if the system is running fine now, I would suggest leaving things as they are. Just tuck this knowledge about disabled services away and if you eventually run into problems related to those services then consider enabling them again.

It's up to you. These are two different update sites. One does Windows only. The Microsoft Update site includes updates for MS products including Windows. If you have Office products installed, the MS Update site is very convenient.

Post this question in the Media Player newsgroup. Be sure to include more details about the toolbar problem and your version of Media Player in your post. There is a link to the Media Player newsgroup on this page:
