

Re: Deleting Redundant Users

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.basics/2004-05/4298.html>

From: Stentorian (msn_at_phoenixcreative.co.uk)

Date: 05/27/04

Date: Thu, 27 May 2004 09:47:54 +0100

I did, but I will repeat myself for the hard of hearing.

I have a couple of users (2) that I have created and deleted using "Control Panel >> User Accounts"

They now no longer appear as users in User Accounts, or on the welcome screen at windows logon. However, they can still be used to logon if you make users type in a username (instead of the welcome screen.) I can also access them from ActiveHTML configuration console that I have running. So clearly the users still exist.

I have been advised to remove them using the computer management console, but I do not have 'Local Users and Groups' section in this console.

How do I remove them? I am running XP home.

"David Candy" <david@mvps.org> wrote in message
news:ekxK1X8QEHA.2468@TK2MSFTNGP11.phx.gbl...

You refuse to give any information. I don't even know what you are talking about. Everyone who has answered you is guessing at what you mean. I don't guess because I am really tired of people asking questions without supplying information.

So stop clogging up the group with pointless drivel or ask the exact question you want an answer too.

--

<http://home.comcast.net/~wizardofwhimsy/index.html>

"Stentorian" <msn@phoenixcreative.co.uk> wrote in message
news:ulkj8R8QEHA.2468@tk2msftngp13.phx.gbl...

> Instead of throwing abuse around, why don't you avail me of your wisdom.

Or

> do you just post abuse to disguise the fact that you don't actually have an > answer?

>

>

> "David Candy" <david@mvps.org> wrote in message

> news:%23I1CWN8QEHA.1340@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...

microsoft.public.windowsxp.basics: Re: Deleting Redundant Users

```
> You are really thick aren't you.
>
> --
> -----
> http://home.comcast.net/~wizardofwhimsy/index.html
> "Stentorian" <msn@phoenixcreative.co.uk> wrote in message
> news:Oa4JrK8QEHA.568@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...
> > I do not have 'local users and groups' in the computer management > console -
> > which maybe part of the problem?
> >
> > "ITassist" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message > > news:59F706EE-FF32-4612-BA74-7808BFD7BB44@microsoft.com...
> > > There is a chance that even though the user accounts have been deleted,
> > for whatever reason the profiles were not deleted, thus allowing said
> > users
> > to log on with a cached account.
> > > Head into
> > > C:\Documents and settings > > > and see if there are any folders in there that resemble the names of the > > people you deleted. If so, delete those folders and that should take care
> > of
> > your issue.
> > > Also, if you right click on my computer, and head to manage that'll bring > > up the administrative tools window. Look for "Local users and groups"
and > > hit the + sign to bring the menu down, cruise into users and see if any
of
> > those accounts are stilll there, from here you should be able to delete
> > and
> > edit how you see fit.
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
```