

Re: Synchronize Error

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.basics/2004-07/3817.html>

From: Ned Heller (epheller_at_bulladdress.net)

Date: 07/23/04

Date: Fri, 23 Jul 2004 07:27:14 -0700

I have Windows 2000 on my laptop and use the synchronization feature a lot. My files are located on the office network so that my secretary can get at them, etc. But when I am away from work (on a plane or such) I have all my files right there on the laptop.

Now I would like to do the same thing on two of my home computers. Unfortunately, synchronization doesn't seem to be a feature of XP Home.

"Ken_in_DC" <KeninDC@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:7E7DE304-CE15-4B39-9CF8-BD566AF8BBFE@microsoft.com...

> Ned,

> No, I haven't received any replies, unfortunately.

> I am using XP Pro from a laptop here at work. I have XP Home at home, but never have tried to synch that machine since it doesn't go anywhere and there's no network to synch with anyway for that set up. I still use Briefcase for some things, more as a way to back up though.

> I'm thinking of experimenting by taking the folder I want to synch, but can't, and moving it to a folder that does synch correctly and see what happens.

> Ken

>

> "Ned Heller" wrote:

>

>> Ken, Did you ever get a reply to this question? I have been trying to do >> the same thing, but there seems to be no way to add files and folders to the >> list in the synchronization manager. I have begun to suspect that this is a >> difference between XP Pro and XP Home. I have XP Home.

>>

>> But, I am not sure.

>>

>>

>> "Ken_in_DC" <Ken_in_DC@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message >> news:5941491D-9136-4D34-9461-48BA1FA7CB1B@microsoft.com...

>>> I routinely synchronize my on-line LAN files to my laptop, but lately > > been unable to add new file folders to the list. I get "cannot find file > > specified" errors, even though I hit the make_available_offline menu > > selection. There are entire directory structures I need off line that I > > can't take with me.

I've

> > > Help?

> > > Ken

> >

> >

> >

> >