Okay, I admit that this was very stupid but I couldn't get Windows to start one day. So I reinstalled XP. I thought that it would give me the option to repair instead on reinstall somewhere along the way but it didn't. So now my computer is working but it is very low on memory and I'm guessing that its from the info that was left from before. But now I can't access those files. If anyone could help me with step-by-step instructions on how to fix this, I would really appreciate it. I really do not know much about computers so if I need to reformat or something like that, please tell me how. Thanks in advance.
