

Undo p/w protected access to Int Explorer

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.basics/2005-02/1333.html>

From: Yabbadoo (lsdolby_at_ignore.ntlwor.com)

Date: 02/05/05

Date: Sat, 05 Feb 2005 22:34:26 GMT

Daughter's XP pc setup – it can't get to the internet without first requiring log-in in to her MSN account. It's a pain in the arsis (cockney rhyming slang, for non-Brit's info) when needing driver downloads, not hotmail access.

Is this normal for users with Hotmail accounts, or is it possible to use Internet Explorer for its designed purpose? She's happy to use MSN as home page – I prefer "about blank" – no hassle, no screen clutter.

If normal access is possible, how do we correct her set-up? (I'm not familiar with either hotmail or .Net (or whatever it is – the passport thingy – don't use it myself).

Appreciate friendly guidance – Len