

Re: Administrator Group Accounts

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.basics/2005-07/msg01973.html>

- From: Vince <NoSPAM2THISHAM@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Mon, 25 Jul 2005 14:39:23 GMT
-

On Sun, 24 Jul 2005 18:02:16 -0700, Malke <notreally@xxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

>Vince wrote:

>

>>

>>

>> I have several user accounts that are Members of the Administrators >> group existing in my XPpro; as seen when using Properties under >> Computer Management/ Local Users and Groups/ Users.

>>

>> Do members of the Administrators group have equal authority rights?

>

>Yes.

>

>> Or, is there something unique about the original/default >> Administrator?

>

>No.

>

>Malke

Thank you for your reply.

Then it does not matter what the selected named, or renamed, user accounts are, if within the Administrators Group, any one of the members can restore/troubleshoot a problem.

I was greatly concerned that the original/default administrator user account that is generated during installation of XPpro had something else –builtin– that would be important if/when I had to contact Dell for assistance. This computer has Dell OEM XPpro SP2 preinstalled.

Ciao,

~ Vince ~

- References:

- ◆ Administrator Group Accounts

- ◇ From: Vince

- ◆ Re: Administrator Group Accounts

- ◇ From: Malke

- Prev by Date: Re: New HD now PC does not switch off

- Next by Date: Re: Size of individual folders contents...

- Previous by thread: Re: Administrator Group Accounts

- Next by thread: Re: Administrator Group Accounts

- Index(es):

- ◆ Date

- ◆ Thread