

Re: Pinging Sharon

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.basics/2006-01/msg01968.html>

- From: "Pete" <pete@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 31 Jan 2006 14:38:41 -0500
-

Pete wrote:

> Ken Blake, MVP wrote:

>> Pete wrote:

>>

>>> Excuse me Tom...but IE/OE are part of windows xp and this is a >>> windows xp newsgroup isn't it. Plus I have seen many posts on IE/OE >>> in the past in this group. So why are you telling me this...Pete

>>

>>

>> What you say is true, and Outlook Express questions are therefore not >> inappropriate here. Nevertheless, most folks here are not necessarily >> Outlook Express experts and your chances of getting the help you need >> would be greater if you would post in a more specialized OE >> newsgroup, where the OE experts hang out.

>

> Okay Ken...That being said I figured out the problem (and there is > no way to fix it).

> I have a list of messages that are mostly ng's but a few e-mails > sprinkled in between. What OE does is, when you view a message in > your inbox and then click the "next" icon in the viewing window, it > goes to the next message that is of the same type (ie ng versus > e-mail). It will not necessarily go to the next message in the list, > only if it is going from a ng post to a ng post, or an e-mail to an > e-mail. That's the story. Take care...Pete

Sorry for confusing you everyone (damn it). I didn't mean inbox (I meant my "old inbox" which I mentioned in my OP, and it probably went over your head - my fault). I understand how the standard inbox and sent items boxes work completely, and I know where the ng posts go (i.e. in the ng's in the news servers you have listed in your folders list).

I copy a lot ng posts that I want to save into a general folder called "old inbox", and there are also a few e-mails in there (which is what is creating the problem I wrote about in my OP). And all sent messages, either ng or e-mail, go to my sent items folder, which is the way OE works.

For what its worth, I just figured out how to easily edit the lists (when I do my cleanups). I just open up the preview pane in (layout) for my mail boxes and do a side by side and click away. I normally keep the preview pane unchecked for my mail boxes, and do the double click to open messages in them, which gives you the viewing window (with the "next" and "previous" icons I was talking about).

Re: Pinging Sharon

Sorry again for the confusion. I see what's going on now and I know what I have to do. Thanks for your comments...Pete

• References:

- ◆ Pinging Sharon
◇ From: Pete
- ◆ Re: Pinging Sharon
◇ From: Tom [Pepper] Willett
- ◆ Re: Pinging Sharon
◇ From: Pete
- ◆ Re: Pinging Sharon
◇ From: Ken Blake, MVP
- ◆ Re: Pinging Sharon
◇ From: Pete

- Prev by Date: Re: To many folders?
- Next by Date: Re: someone in office played trick on me with logon screen
- Previous by thread: Re: Pinging Sharon
- Next by thread: Re: Pinging Sharon
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread