

Re: DHCP causing start lag XP?

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.basics/2007-07/msg00526.html>

- From: mooky <mooky9669@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 14 Jul 2007 16:21:38 -0700
-

On Jul 14, 6:18 pm, mooky <mooky9...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

On Jul 14, 5:54 pm, mooky <mooky9...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

I recently had trouble with my cable internet and replaced my modem...then the network operations had to force my modem to work probably because of some update...anyway, since then, my XP startup has been lagging and I read online it's probably due to connecting to the network using DHCP...how can I correct this? I even did the spyware removal and disabled startup items I didn't need, etc. Hope someone can help me out here..shutdown is great as before, but startup lags when icons appear and then can't do anything for over a min.

another thing that I have just noticed is that I ear a popping sound after XP loads..it's the sound you hear when say a pop up balloon would appear, but I have the balloon tips disabled...maybe whatever that sound means, might have something to do with my start lag..when it happes the taskbar pops up as well and then I move off of it then it goes back to autohide.

just did a sound check in my audio and sound devices...the popping balloon sound was linked to system notification servies. I don't see any error pop up though...gonna google some more and hope that someone can help me out.