Repeat and amplify...

With Auto Restart disabled, I have received several blue screen Stops. Some have indicated memory dump, but this latest blue screen does not indicate a memory dump.

I got this: 0x00000067 (0x00000001, 0x0000000D, 0xC0000005, 0x00000000)

(New Note) Prior to that blue screen I had upgraded BIOS and was disappointed that I still got that blue screen within about 2 hours after the upgrade. Now, (next day), I left the machine on overnight and it had not rebooted. That's over a period of about 15 hours. Maybe that BIOS upgrade has solidified...

XP Home

The machine reboots itself occasionally.

I'm waiting for an AMI BIOS update. While looking into Setup I noticed the Primary Graphics Adapter was PCI. Since there is no PCI adapter, I changed that to "On Board AGP".

It's up and running, waiting to see if it reboots again. Any thoughts as to whether or not this change I made will have any effect?

Re: System Reboots

If it still reboots open Control Panel – System and go to the Advanced tab. Click on the Settings button in the Startup and Recovery (bottom) section of the Window. In the Startup and Recovery window click on the checkbox for "Automatically restart" to clear it if it is selected, then click on OK and Apply as needed to exit.

That should put an end to the sporadic reboots. However they may be replaced by a "Blue Screen Of Death" STOP error message. If that does happen then the contents of the STOP error message, including the STOP code, all 4 parameter values, and any file or module names mentioned will be a direct clue as to the underlying cause of the problem. Post that detailed information back here.

Good luck
