Can anyone here advise from experience on a snapshot taking tool that can take an accurate snapshot of filesystem and Registry.

Take a later one and make a serious comparison. Not just by filename and date but an actual diff where files are really compared, and then spit out a comprehensible report or detailed text file listing the differences.

I don't mean something like Inctrl5. It makes such a fast comparison I know there isn't an actual diff done. But only a light weight filename check or the like.
