how come with all the web pages microsoft has its still a big pain in the butt to find and or understand most of the crap they post?

i have two questions regarding windows xp explorer's search first anyone know how to get search results to not include files inside i zipps? if i wanted to find all animated cursors then copy them to a location i would search for *.ani then when i get results cntrl-a to select all and copy them to a location and copy should work even if the file is bieng used and becuase xp shows file inside archives it just errors until i go through my results and un highlite the files from archives if you think that sucks imaging trying to organize zips with search and there are achives zipped in archives!

also i wonder is there option the can find empty folders? (directories) id love to be able to find folders by size!
