If you refer to:

<http://support.microsoft.com/?id=888111>

It's a hotfix, you must call to get it.

My laptop Thinkpad Z60t from IBM/Lenovo was preloaded with Microsoft Windows XP SP2 in Chinese version. I formatted the laptop, and installed the Microsoft Windows XP SP2 in English version. When I try to install the audio drivers downloaded from there website I get a message "The HDA Audio bus driver is required and not found.". They are not kind enough to point to a location where you can actually download this driver. After many Google searches and digging around on MS's poor excuse for a website, I found I needed KB888111. In there infinite wisdom and keeping in tune with there overall poor site design MS didn't offer a download link. I have searched the 888111US.exe for months but failed. Please do me a favour by finding the file 888111us.exe buried in your laptop C:\IBMTOOLS\DRIVERS\UAAHDAXP\XPSP2 and email me the file to make my audio works. My email is mazhensheng@xxxxxxxxxxxx

Your help is appreciated very much.
