I'm encountering some odd behavior post fbreseal (no ewf on the unit). I've got my image set to not reseal after FBA, so that I can make some additional changes to the system. I have set cmiRemoveAutoLogon through cmiNoHelpFiles all to false, with GenerateComputerName to 1. I run fbreseal with the options -autologon -keepdomain -keepnet -keepuser keepmounted. It completes and pops up a messagebox telling me that it has completed and will restart (whatever that message is). I let it reboot, and while the machine has yet to complete the POST I turn off the machine. I make an image of the drive using Ghost. Up until this point the process is well described and everything makes sense. Beyond here there are no descriptions of the exact behavior that should be expected, and what things may be indicators that something is wrong. Past this point, I have experienced very odd things that I cannot find any cause for. When I boot for the first time after fbreseal, I get the standard progress bar at the bottom of the screen. Fine. I then get a blue screen with a cursor. Okay. But that's all I get. It sits there, doing nothing. After awhile I reboot, and everything appears to be fine. Is this normal? What [i] EXACTLY [/i] should occur during the first boot after fbreseal?

Other odd things that have been happening after fbreseal, such as explorer.exe being deleted and the touchscreen alignment going wonky (y-axis reversed). All this weird behavior is driving me nuts! A detailed description of xpe's post-fbreseal behavior would be greatly appreciated!
