

Re: Why does WindowsXP

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-03/22833.html>

---

From: Jim Macklin (p51mustang[threeX12])

Date: 03/23/04

Date: Tue, 23 Mar 2004 08:24:28 -0600

Really stupid people have trouble with the clock in the VCR. Some smarter people can properly set-up and maintain a personal computer. Some nerds really like Linux because it is/was open source based on Unix. As a niche product, the script-kiddie virus writers don't know enough to bother with attacking Linux. Besides, they don't have a single "evil rich guy" to attack. Some Linux users feel very much more powerful and smarter because they can use the Linux commands line. The newer Linux GUIs don't interest them, computers are intended only for geniuses.

If moving to newer, faster and more stable code and hardware makes Bill Gates money, the only problem I can think of is that I want to earn some money too. I'd like to meet him and see if I could change his politics.

"John Corson" <john@corson.org> wrote in message news:ouX7c.512$g07.480696@newshog.newsread.com...
| Because it gives Billionnaire Bill another reason to upgrade to a newer
| "Improved" version of Windows with more issues, of course, then he can give
| us another "New and Improved" version of windows, etc., etc., etc.
|
| You want something you can improve on yourself, with the help of others FREE
| of charge? Then install and learn from LINUX!
|
| In defense of MS and Windows, though, it is fun, I think, to download
| patches and updates. This provides us with a "break" from the mundane
| things of life like spreadsheets, word processing, gaming, Instant
| Messaging, reading e-mail and surfing the internet!
|

|
| "Smurf" <spam_me_hard@juno.com> wrote in message
| news:MPG.1ac8ee6c767660f9989683@news.apk.net...
| > Suck?
|
|