

Re: Microsoft Voice Recognition

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-05/13707.html>

---

From: Anthony Procissi [MSFT] (procissi_at_online.microsoft.com)

Date: 05/13/04

Date: Thu, 13 May 2004 12:43:46 -0700

Hi John,

Sorry for the delayed response.

This link provides a tool for transferring the voice recognition data.

(I'd recommend unzipping the files to somewhere other than the default temp directory).

<http://download.microsoft.com/download/6/f/4/6f4fb125-9834-42e1-8bb5-474c29b060e4/SpProfileMgr.exe>

--

-Anthony Procissi [MSFT]

US-Application Experience & Compatibility

This posting is provided "AS IS" with no warranties, and confers no rights.

"RJK" <notatospam@hotmail.com> wrote in message

news:%23yod03GOEHA.556@tk2msftngp13.phx.gbl...

> When you achieve a robust Windows installation that's doing what you want > to do, you should create a restore point. And should you go a few weeks > or > more with Windows as you like it, and everything is working properly, you > create a restore point, there can never be too many restore points.

> it

> Restore

> points in addition to the automatic ones, ...so that you can recognize

> your

> own labels given to the "extra" restore points.

>

> It is unfortunate that you have installed magazine software that has upset > your Windows platform. You should explore the possibility that a restore > point exists, that could restore your machine to the condition it was in,

> before it was upset.

>

> You should also examine your voice recog. software to see how it is > structured, where it lives, and what can be saved. I suspect it's quite > possible to save the work you've already put into it. You'll perhaps need > to talk with the software house that wrote the software. They'll be able > to > tell you how it works, and where and what user data files are stored in

> your > machine, and they'll be able to tell you how to install that software

> afresh

> and restore your user data / profiles etc.

>

> regards, Richard

>

microsoft.public.windowsxp.general: Re: Microsoft Voice Recognition

>
> "john tee" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message > news:c3a001c43863$3364d360$a501280a@phx.gbl...
>> this is a RE-post
>>
>> I'm running windows X. P. professional and have been >> successfully using Microsoft voice recognition within >> Microsoft Word for some time. I have voice trained the >> software to almost perfection over many months, and this >> is particularly pleasing as I suffer extreme arthritis in >> my hands which makes typing very painful . However, just >> recently the windows X. P. platform has become quite >> unstable , probably due to magazine demos which I have >> tested, and the only solution seems to be reformatting my >> hard drive, and a clean install of X.P.
>>
>> I need to know if it is possible to save "my personal >> voice recognition training data" , with view to burning >> this to CD, and thereafter copying this across once the >> new install is complete.
>>
>> Can anybody advise me whether this is possible , and >> precisely how to go about it .
>>
>> Many thanks in advance , respectfully yours , John in the >> united kingdom .
>>
>> PS , this text has been compiled using the Microsoft >> voice recognition facility , hopefully there are not too
>> many errors
>
>