

Re: Internet Connection Halting. Reboot Needed

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-05/2543.html>

---

From: Phil \(\purplehaz\) (I.fix.probs_at_for.you)

Date: 05/03/04

Date: Sun, 2 May 2004 22:30:19 -0400

Make sure your network adapter isn't using power management to turn it off to save power. Check this in the network adapters properties in device manager.

Take the router out the equation for a while and see if anything changes. Enable the xp firewall temporarily. If you do not lose connection then you should look to the router. Check for a firmware upgrade for the router.

Sonny wrote:

> Hello,
>
> I have a broadband internet access (cable modem and a D-Link Router) > and I have the following problem. My internet connection becomes > inactive from time to time. When I restart my computer everything is > working again, but it is getting really annoying since I have to > restart every 1 hour or so.
>
> Any suggestions would be appreciated.
>
> V. Ivanov