

Re: Windows XP & SP2

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-06/11627.html>

From: drum 118 (drum118_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 06/11/04

Date: Fri, 11 Jun 2004 06:10:12 GMT

Plato wrote:

> anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com wrote:
> >
> > When the final version of SP2 for Windows XP becomes > > available, would users without an genuine version of the > > operating system still be able to install the update?
>
> I'm a firm believer that for any OS you are using you need a real CD for > it. My opinion also excludes the proprietary os cds you get from many > big brands which I dont like.
>
> Again, just an opinion. I dont like fake steak or mystery meat. I like a > real steak.
>
> --
> <http://www.bootdisk.com/>

I have the real thing and it was given to me by MS at one of their meetings.

I never had this problems in all the years of reformatting and reinstall any OS. Always keep my data on other partitions as it is easy to blow away the OS and other programs during testing and not worry about it and do backup on it.

I have never had to backup my music that have been transfer off LP to MP3. Never seen this before.

MS just gave me a CD for RC1 SP2 when I already DL it last week.