

Re: Macro making

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-06/14602.html>

From: Phil (I.fix.probs_at_for.you)

Date: 06/14/04

Date: Mon, 14 Jun 2004 09:22:11 -0400

Ok, same theroy though. Edit the macro so that it unlocks the sheet, does it functions, then locks the sheet again. I'm more of a excel macro person, so the experts in the word group should be able to help you out with the syntax for the code.

KIT wrote:

> Thanks

> It's a Word document im working on

>

>

> I assume you're talking about excel. If you lock/protect > the document and > you have a macro that edits/changes cells, then you can do

> one of two > things. Either check the boxes to allow the edit you need > or edit the macro

> code to unlock the cell, edit it, then lock it again.

> The folks in the excel newsgroup can help you out.

>

> KIT wrote:

>> when recording the macro, the first thing i'd like it to >> do is Lock/Protect the document. Also, only allow the >> user to make changes in certain "Mail-Merged" drop down >> fields.

>> Problem is when it's >> locked it automatically stops producing the macro